

Safari Living (Mini Lifestyle Library series)

For decades, the East African savanna has attracted Europeans eager to experience life with nature at its largest safari. Drawing on their experience of the safari, these visitors have created a relaxed yet elegant style of living, which is distinctly displayed in the architecture and interiors of the homes, lodges, and camps they have established across the vast eastern reaches of the continent. Safari Living captures this alluring style of interior design, with its elemental approach to texture and color, its borrowing of native African patterns and architecture, and its vital interaction with nature. Photographer Tim Beddow is a regular contributor to publications that include The World of Interiors and Architectural Digest.
