

Lightforms: Energy Flow Photography

Lightforms: Energy Flow Photography is a collection of Art Photography by Adrian Ravarour. In 1968, Ravarour conceived and created the Energy Flow System of Arts utilizing biopsychic energy as a perceptual, directional, and evolutionary agent to activate the spiritual being. Over the past four decades, Energy Flow has formed the basis for a comprehensive synthesis of the fine and transcendental arts intended to promote spiritual transformation and higher consciousness, and these images represent a direct application of the Energy Flow theory to the medium of photography. The images contained in this book portray energy networks, vortices, and dimensional planes where energies interact, and are evocative of greater spiritual dimensions drawn from Ravarours practice of his own Energy Meditation exercises as the source of visual inspiration. While these photographs might appear to be paintings or computer art, they are not. All Energy Flow photographs are made inside the camera the moment the image is taken, and are not generated after the shutter has been closed. Concurrent with the release of Lightforms: Energy Flow Photography, Ravarour has published Keys to Spiritual Being: Energy Meditation and Synchronization Exercises.
