

Green Living - Travel: Explore the World while Keeping our Air Clean

Travel is a necessary part of most of our lives. We need to take short trips to the grocery store, medium length trips to get to and from work, and longer trips to visit relatives. Its important that we look into ways to take these trips in as eco-friendly a manner as possible. Gas and oil are some of our most limited resources, and our current combustion systems cause pollution to fill our air. By optimizing the way we travel, we can save those resources for more important uses such as heating homes. We can also strive to keep the air we breathe as clean as possible. Its not always practical to walk everywhere you go. Still, with these tips, you can make wise decisions about the trips you take. All authors proceeds from the Green Living series support environmental charity.
